SPRING 2021

New investors spring into action

With interest rates plummeting to record lows, savers are discovering that cash is not always king. This is encouraging a new band of investors to dip their toes in the investment market.

While some families have suffered financially during the pandemic, many have saved significant sums due to a reduction in spending on non-essential items. Official data¹ shows the UK household savings ratio soared from 9.5% in the first three months of 2020 to a record 27.4% in the second quarter and has remained historically high since.

Save or invest?

Bank of England data shows £125bn was squirrelled into savings accounts last year and that figure is expected to rise substantially during the first half of 2021. As a result, many people have seen their savings balances grow at a time when ultra-low deposit rates offer little in the way of return, prompting many to consider alternatives to holding cash and take their first tentative steps into the investment market.

The value of advice

With so many funds available, the investment process can appear daunting and new investors often find it difficult knowing where to start. The key is to formulate a sound investment plan with sensible goals and to seek advice.

A study seeking to quantify the value of financial advice, found that people have better financial outcomes when they have an ongoing relationship with an adviser, 'Those who reported receiving advice at both time points in our analysis had nearly 50% higher average pension wealth than those only advised at the start.' Benefits were greater for less-affluent investors, with a 'just getting by' group enjoying a 24% (£35,054) boost to their pension wealth across the ten year study period².

Marathon not a sprint

Before investing, it's important to establish a savings safety net and commit to investing over the long term, meaning at least five, preferably ten years. Historically, although investing in equities has delivered better returns than cash, there is inevitably a risk the value of investments can fall; we therefore need to establish your risk tolerance before recommending any investments.

Whether you're thinking about your pension, establishing an investment portfolio, a stocks and shares Individual Savings Account (ISA), or perhaps a Junior Individual Savings Account (JISA) for under-18s in the family; if you're looking to make your money work harder this spring but need help getting started, we can help you begin your investment journey.

Why it pays to update your pension expression of wishes

An expression of wishes tells your pension provider who you would like the beneficiaries of your pension to be in the event of your death. Multiple beneficiaries can be named, and you can state how much of your pension you want each to receive.

However, while many people complete an expression of wishes when they first open a pension, it's easy to forget to update it as circumstances change or mistakenly believe this isn't necessary as long you have a Will.

Consequences of not updating an expression of wishes

The best way to ensure your wishes are followed is to keep your expression of wishes up to date. If you don't, there's a risk your money may not end up where you wanted it to. Pension providers will normally pay out according to their clients' wishes, but they have the flexibility to choose different beneficiaries if deemed appropriate.

Not updating your expression of wishes could therefore make the process of settling the death benefits more difficult and drawn out for potential beneficiaries at an already painful time.

How we can help

We can help with all aspects of your pension planning, so don't hesitate to get in touch if you'd like further assistance updating your pension expression of wishes.

The value of investments can go down as well as up and you may not get back the full amount you invested. The past is not a guide to future performance and past performance may not necessarily be repeated.

Hopes of a "swifter and more sustained economic recovery" // Key points – Spring Budget 2021 // Planning to retire in 2021? // Millions keeping ill health a secret // 'Side hustles' become a lockdown staple // The financial basics you wish you'd learnt at school // Dividing your finances on divorce

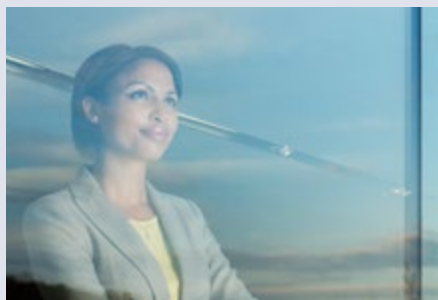

Hopes of a “swifter and more sustained economic recovery”

Chancellor of the Exchequer, Rishi Sunak, delivered his second Budget on 3 March, which centred on a three-part plan to continue supporting people and businesses through the pandemic, to fix public finances once recovery is underway and to lay the foundations for the future economy.

The Chancellor opened his statement by revealing the latest predictions from the Office for Budget Responsibility (OBR) which provide hope of “a swifter and more sustained economic recovery” than previously expected. The latest forecast predicts growth for the UK economy of 4% in 2021 and 7.3% in 2022. Mr Sunak also confirmed details of various COVID-19 support measures to bring total fiscal support to over £407bn.

From a taxation perspective, the Chancellor was left with little room for manoeuvre as the Conservative manifesto pledged not to lift Income Tax, National Insurance or VAT rates, so some key tax thresholds will be frozen. The Personal Allowance will rise with inflation in April as planned, to £12,570, before 20% Income Tax becomes payable, and the higher rate threshold, at which people start to pay tax at 40%, will rise to £50,270. However, both thresholds will then be frozen at these levels until April 2026. Similarly, tax thresholds for the pension Lifetime Allowance, Inheritance Tax and the annual exemption for Capital Gains Tax will remain until 2026.

Interestingly, a new NS&I retail ‘green savings bond’ will be launched later this year to fund renewable energy and clean transport projects.

Millions keeping ill health a secret

According to a recent survey³, seven million people (13% of the population) are keeping mental health issues secret from their loved ones, while just under four million (7%) are hiding a physical health problem.

As well as causing symptoms such as anxiety (34%), guilt (29%) and difficulties sleeping (25%), keeping secrets from our families can also have serious long-term implications.

Protecting against the unexpected

Keeping family members in the dark about important health issues could be painful and shocking if you died or became seriously ill. What's more, they could find themselves facing financial hardship at an extremely difficult time.

Even if you are insured, for example via a life insurance or critical illness policy, your claim may be rejected if, like with your family, you also hide your condition from your insurer.

In these difficult times, a problem shared is a problem halved. Don't keep things to yourself – talk to us, we can help you put sufficient protection in place to safeguard you and your family against unexpected life events.

'Side hustles' become a lockdown staple

If you've seen your income drop during the pandemic, have you considered taking up a side hustle? The term is an Americanism that is slowly making its way into common usage here in the UK. It refers to the practice of taking up a second job alongside your main job.

A nation of side hustlers?

A poll of 2,000 adults⁴ published in October 2020 found that a third of respondents expected to face an average shortfall of £239 going into the festive season, with the result that 20% had started a side hustle to increase their income. What's more, 55% of them said they expected to continue into the New Year.

Common ways to earn extra money include selling old clothes, DVDs and tech, doing odd jobs like DIY, lawnmowing or cleaning, and making and selling baked goods or crafts.

Tax implications

Don't forget that side hustling could have tax implications, e.g. changing your Income Tax band. You also need to remember to set aside tax on your side hustle earnings, as you'll need to declare and pay this within specified timescales.

The financial basics you wish you'd learnt at school

A survey of British employees reveals that a significant proportion of working adults wish they'd been taught more about basic financial topics at school.

According to research⁵, the number one topic UK adults wish they'd learnt more about at school is pensions: 40% of respondents to a survey said that learning about pensions at school would have encouraged them to take their own pension more seriously as a young adult.

Would these skills have helped you?

Other popular financial topics British workers wish they'd learnt about at school include:

- Basic money management (e.g. budgeting) – 28%
- Saving methods – 28%
- General investment knowledge – 27%
- Understanding interest rates – 23%
- Mortgages and how to apply for them – 21%

The vast majority of the respondents (68%) felt they would have benefited from this type of general, everyday financial know-how at a younger age.

You're not alone

If you feel a little at sea with the financial basics, you're certainly not alone – and yet many people are needlessly ashamed of their lack of financial understanding. A more recent study⁶ revealed that 55% of adults struggle to open up about money, with nearly one in five (18%) citing shame or embarrassment as the primary reason. We're here to tell you that nobody is expected to know everything about their finances.

Financial advice is key

If you're concerned about your finances or need help with basic financial topics, we aren't here to judge. We're on hand with simple, jargon-free advice that will provide you with the confidence and understanding you need to take control of your finances once and for all.

Dividing your finances on divorce

The past year has sadly put huge strain on many relationships, with couples locked down together for months on end whilst trying to work remotely and home school their children, bringing relationships to breaking point. This brings financial challenges.

Separating your finances

When a couple divorce, they need to decide how to fairly divide financial assets such as their home, money in current and savings accounts, investments and pensions. For example, they may be entitled to a share in the sale of their property, or a portion of their ex-spouse's pension. They may also have to make decisions about the value of maintenance payments required to maintain their and their children's lifestyle.

Currently, however, the heightened stress and reduced financial circumstances caused by the pandemic may make coming to an agreement more difficult. If a couple is unable to agree, they may still be able to settle out of court by hiring a trained mediator or collaborative lawyer. If not, they may have to ask a court to decide.

Talk it through

We can help couples divide their assets tax-efficiently and guide individuals through how to best invest the proceeds of a settlement. We can also help set up comprehensive protection cover and help people manage their post-divorce expenditure.
